

THE AKRON DEMOCRAT

AN OBJECT LESSON.

Canon W. H. Fletcher, vicar and rural dean of Wrexham, Denbighshire, Wales, residuary canon of St. Asaph Cathedral, and proctor for the chapter in the Convocation of Canterbury, landed in New York on Tuesday. He came to attend the coming bi-centenary of the founding of Yale College. The significance of his visit is found in the fact that the bones of Ellihu Yale, patron of the college in its early and needy days, and from whom it is named, lie buried in the little church yard of Wrexham, in North Wales.

The reverend gentleman with a plurality of titles was held up on the pier in New York, and the experience of his rather chilly reception on the shores of this land of liberty must have been an eye-opener to this rural dean, etc.

The hold-up was not indeed by any one who will ever figure in the police court for it, but it was done by highwaymen none the less.

It seems that Canon Fletcher brought over with him a package of pamphlets containing a description and picture of the church of St. Giles, at Wrexham, where the remains of Ellihu lie, and which was once accounted one of the seven wonders of Wales. These were to be distributed as presents and souvenirs among the alumni and guests at the bi-centennial occasion referred to. But the vigilant custom-house officials suspected some harm to the liberties of their country in this visit of a rural dean, etc., and so they kept him waiting on the pier in New York for several hours, while they rummaged his luggage, and when they discovered the pamphlets aforesaid, they pounced upon them and made him pay a duty for bringing them into this land of gospel light from whence we are sending money to ransom missionaries out of the hands of freebooters abroad. Yes, they made him pay a duty! If it had been some one of the great army of shoddies returning from their annual pilgrimage to "Yurup," loaded down with silks and jewelry bought in exchange for money which some one here had worked for and earned, or if it had been one of the hordes of white coolies being transported here all the time to take the place of strikers, or to underwork those who are not striking, no duty would have been exacted, and no one would have been kept shivering on the wharf pending the ransacking of trunks.

And all this is under a tariff law which it is now insisted is the perfection of wisdom and must not be amended or meddled with, in the smallest particular, not even to give our people a chance to sell goods abroad.

It is one consolation to know that these Yale College gentlemen, who will be very much in evidence at the occasion referred to, are in this instance getting a slight dose of the medicine which they have been helping to cram down the throats of the American people for some years past. They will swallow it, however, and will keep right on, begging donations from the purse-proud beneficiaries of this infamy upon economy, and kicking out of their faculties any man who dares to discuss its wisdom or its equity, placing money before truth and sound doctrine, and in time they will, of course, reap the sure result which the Inquisition brought upon the universities of Europe in an early day, whenever they strangled free expression of opinion. And the degrees which will be conferred by Yale College next week will be showered upon the men who profit by, or defend, the system of legalized spoliation under which the poor Welsh clergyman was robbed on the dock in New York the other morning.

The death of ex-Governor John Sargent Pillsbury, of Minnesota, removes one whose name will always be associated with the building up of the northwest. He was a worker. From the time he became of age, when he began his business career, he recognized the principle that hard, earnest, painstaking toil is essential to any great success. He succeeded, and not only as third Governor of Minnesota, but as a philanthropist and public-spirited worker his fame will endure.

The Southern editors who are losing their heads because the President invited Booker T. Washington to dine at the White House, are making ridiculous figures of themselves. If such a trivial circumstance as this can throw the Southern statesmen off their balance, it does not speak very well for the accuracy of the predictions of the Northern orators that the Administration had finally cemented the good fellowship of the North and the South.

The Linotype operator caused the Warren Tribune to convey the startling information that Judge Anderson "is a native of this country." Instead of "this county," as the writer intended to say, The Judge was born in Trumbull county and would be regarded there as the favorite son in the Congressional race were Gilmer, "other fair charmer, away."

According to the testimony of Capt. Cook, Commodore Schley continually urged him to edge in toward the enemy while the Brooklyn was pursuing the Spaniards. The historian who called the Admiral a "coward and a cad" could have saved trouble had he submitted his revised proofs to Capt. Cook.

President Diaz, of Mexico, has prevented a corn corner by removing the tariff duty. When Congress meets again Representative Babcock might cite the Mexican President's action as an example of how Americans might be spared the expense of a corner in steel.

The action of the City Commissioners in referring bridge bids to the Council without recommendation, while it is quite unusual, will doubtless be highly gratifying to the latter body. Councilmen may yet come to feel that they are officials of consequence.

WISE and Otherwise.

No stoves in the open cars.

It would be too bad if the Canton-Akron should be pulled in two.

Too bad they can't burn gas in street car stoves.

A little money in the bank is not a bad recommendation for a young man.

Akron people went on doing business all day just as if the Delaware opening were not in progress.

Maybe they will ask Mayor Doyle to testify about the clean streets when that injunction case is heard.

Maybe, after all, it would be wiser for the newspapers to wait till those

AN INTERNAL REMEDY.

A Pleasant Tasting Tablet; Simple, Convenient; Cures Every Form of Catarrh.

The use of inhalers, douches, sprays, salves and powders for catarrh is a nuisance and inconvenience at the best, and cannot compare with antiseptic remedies in tablet form for internal use.

Internal remedies are the only ones which can really reach the seat of the disease which is in the blood and local applications can no more cure catarrh than rheumatism or kidney trouble, the excessive secretion in nose and throat being local manifestations of a deep seated poison in the blood. Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, the most successful of the various internal remedies, is composed principally of highly concentrated antiseptics, which destroy the catarrh germs in the blood and cause them to be eliminated through the natural channels.

Progressive physicians use and advise Stuart's Catarrh Tablets because they contain no cocaine, no opiate, no enervating drug whatever, but are composed of Gualacol, Hydrastin, Red Gum and similar catarrh antiseptics, and are so safe and pleasant that even little children may use them with excellent results.

Catarrh sufferers who have wasted time and money on local applications should not despair of a radical cure until a trial of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets has been made.

A complete treatment may be purchased at any drug store for fifty cents.

railroad men quit contradicting one another.

There need be no alarm over the fact that a good many guns are being bought these days—hunting season is coming on apace.

Mr. Seidell and Mr. Walker, also others of the Council, are getting ready for the melodramatic farce comedy performance at the usual time Monday evening.

As if it were not already a familiar name, A. B. Smith is making it more and more familiar by putting it over the doors of three or four piano stores besides the one in Akron.

It is said that his friends will never again offer to pay for the cutting of Mr. Fred C. Wood's hair. When they thought his locks were too long they told him so, and he agreed to get a hair-cut if each of them would chip in a penny. They did and the hair cut was obtained.

If Mr. Welty told Mr. Childs that the Canton-Akron road had not been sold, that settles it. Of course Mr. Welty is the only one who knows anything about the matter, and Mr. Childs is entirely warranted in saying that "fabulous" and "false" stories are printed.

One good active reporter will investigate from one to twenty rumors in the course of a day, in search of news and truth. As a rule about 16 out of 20 rumors are proved false and are ignored. But when gentlemen of good repute, who are in a position to have information, make statements, whether or not they allow the use of their names, it is a reporter's business to place some confidence in their assertions, and not doubt them entirely because some other man says the other thing. In nine of every ten newspaper offices the first instructions given a reporter are "Be accurate." And yet it is not strange, however unfortunate it may be, that among several hundred news items there should occasionally be an error. Some of them may be caused by believing the wrong man, in whose favor it may be, the preponderance of evidence lies. But, of course, no one ever gave a reporter false information wilfully and for selfish purposes. Why, that would be wicked, and it is never done—never!

LITERARY ESSENTIALS.

An author used to think a thought before he went a-printing.

His task with arduous care was wrought.

The night oil kept him squinting.

Today, alas, it matters not.

What you may have to tell 'em.

For books the public pays a lot—

If they are done in vellum.

So do not strive, with furrowed brow,

Some great thought to be finding;

The things to be considered now

Are paper, ink and binding.

"The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.: Gentlemen—For the past few years I have tried several kinds of medicines when I was feeling badly, but I am free to admit that I never found anything to equal Peruna.

"Last fall I contracted a severe cold which seemed to settle in my joints and made me very uncomfortable for a couple of weeks, until I tried Peruna. Before a week was passed the soreness was gone and before I had used two bottles I was completely restored."

Yours very truly,

J. Wilson Gaire.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.: Gentlemen—As a tonic I find your Peruna an excellent medicine to build up and restore the nervous system.

My work is out doors and traveling to a great extent, and during inclement weather I especially value it as a preventative against colds, and as a catarrhal treatment it is unexcelled. It is with much pleasure I give Peruna my hearty endorsement."

Yours truly,

Ida Harned.

Barbara Alberty, corner Seventh and Walnut streets, Appleton, Wis., writes as follows in regard to Peruna:

"For years I have suffered with backache and severe pains in the side. I doctored so much that I became discouraged.

"A school friend told me how very much Peruna had benefited her and I sent out for a bottle, which did more to relieve me than all the other medicine I had ever taken.

"I used it faithfully for two weeks and it completely cured me. I have not had any pains since, anywhere, but feel like a new woman. I am truly thankful for what Peruna has done for me."

Yours very truly,

Barbara Alberty.

Going to His Death, His Heart Unsoftened.

Babylon, L. I., Oct. 19.—Unforgiving to the last, even in his dying moments, refusing to welcome back to his place at Islip the beautiful young woman who until she married against his will was to have been heiress to the $20,000,000 he must leave behind him, aged George C. Taylor is in a state of collapse, and is not expected to live more than a few days longer.

The physicians say that grieving over the absence of the girl who was the light of his declining years hastened the approaching dissolution.

The cause of his deep sorrow, formerly Lena Head, is now Mrs. Frederick William Bodley, wife of Mr. Taylor's one-time landscape gardener, will sail for a honeymoon trip abroad. No message has come from the bedside of the dying millionaire to summon the happy pair back to be forgiven, but it is known that such a message would bring them to the Taylor mansion even if it came just before the gangplank of the steamer was drawn in. The separation from their benefactor has pained both bride and bridegroom keenly, but their love for one another outweighs their sorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Bodley are now visiting at the home of Frederick Hazard, No. 122 Ravine ave., Yonkers, where they have been since leaving the Warner house at Blue Point, L. I. recently.

The romance of the Bodleys was the summer sensation among society folk at Islip.

Comforting the last moments of the dying master is the mother of Mrs.

He Will Not Forgive, Even on Deathbed.

Bodley, who ever since the runaway match of her daughter and the landscape gardener, has been as implacable as the aged millionaire in her refusal to forgive.

Time and again since their marriage have Bodley and his bride driven up to the gates of the Taylor estate, and asked to be admitted. Each time they have been repulsed, and finally their patience was worn out, and they left the spot where their romance began.

Miss Head was Mr. Taylor's ward. Her mother is wealthy in her own right, but the Taylor millions were to be the girl's portion also if she made a marriage that pleased her guardian. The Taylors never entertained and the girl plied for society.

Bodley was landscape gardener for Mr. Taylor for eight years. He watched the young girl grow into womanhood. She is eighteen years of age, he is 35. He worked with her and drove with her.

It was the pleasure of the decrepit master of millions that it should be Bodley's special care to look after his ward. Landscape gardening was neglected for the espionage usually delegated to a French governess, and the humble gardener, tall, broad-shouldered and distinguished looking, one day woke up to the fact that he was in love with his master's ward.

It was not, however, until the summer just passed that he declared his passion and found it reciprocated.

The runaway match followed, frowned upon by both mother and master. The Bodleys were confident that they would be forgiven. The youthful bride cried bitterly when she found this was not to be the case, but she is happy in her love for her husband. Bodley came to this country from England at the time of the Chicago World's Fair. He comes of a good family and is well educated.
